

Lend a Hand

In many developing countries, communities are struggling to make use of their natural resources because they lack important capital goods. In this project, students learn about economics and culture as you investigate ways in which a few extra dollars can permit entrepreneurs to help their communities thrive.

The project culminates when students use the KIVA.org website to select an entrepreneur to whom they hope to loan money, then create their own fundraiser in order to help an individual and their community to thrive!
